Hampton Village—A Historical Perspective

Location! Location! Location! Every realtor will tell you this is the most important feature of your home. Whether buying or selling, location determines the price and attractiveness of your home. But what is it that determines your home's location? Or, in our case, what are the origins of Hampton Village? Why is it called Hampton Village?

The answer goes back over 100 years to a city expansion plan known as the "Yorath Plan." This plan was conceived in 1913 by visionary city commissioner Christopher Yorath. His plan included all of Saskatoon which he envisioned as a beautiful flowery city. To achieve this, he thought the city must be well planned and clean with residential sections separated from industrial areas. He also believed that the natural lay of the land, its undulations and configurations, must be preserved and enhanced. As for streets, he believed it was better to have wider streets. Yorath's plan even included recommended widths for all streets. He proposed center boulevards with grass margins so that the roads could easily be widened if necessary. Open spaces, parks and recreational areas would preserve the natural beauty of the city. Yorath thought it essential that city residents have easy access to parks and green space. Yorath also proposed what he called an "encircling road" around Saskatoon.

Included in Yorath's vision for Saskatoon was an area called "New Hampton Park," located slightly north of the present Hampton Village. If envisioned 100 years ago, why did it take so long for our community to develop? It was not due to the City of Saskatoon's lack of interest in developing New Hampton Park. Some communities were developed according to Yorath's plans but, overall, it was an ambitious plan and events such as The Great War, the Depression and the Second World War prevented all aspects of its development.

But the plan was not forgotten. The city continued to plan for expansions, purchasing land as it became available. The first section of Hampton Village was annexed on July 10, 1979, the second on May 30, 2000. On August 14, 2000 our community was named. The developers proposed Hampton Village because it sat so close to the previously proposed "New Hampton Park." It is easy to see that many of Yorath's ideas were incorporated into today's Hampton Village, especially the importance of parks and recreational areas. And that encircling road? We know it as "Circle Drive" which was finally completed 100 years after Yorath proposed it with the completion of the South Circle Drive Bridge.

The street names in Hampton Village are not derived from the "Yorath Plan." They were selected to link Hampton Village to pioneer businesses from Saskatoon's early days. The street names were chosen and approved by the Naming Advisory Committee on July 19, 2004. Find out the historical significance of your street name on page two! You can also have fun completing the word search about Hampton Village.

Update from our City Councillor- Troy Davies

The twinning of the east bound lane of Claypool between McClocklin and Airport Drive will begin in May. During the twinning of Claypool, the city will address the drainage issues on the corner of Claypool and McClocklin by installing proper catch basins. Mr. Davies has requested the city have single lane traffic, east and westbound, on the westbound lanes while this construction takes place so Claypool Drive can remain open. The work is expected to be completed in July 2016, weather permitting.

The Off - leash Dog Park is currently being tendered with the hopes to begin construction in June.

Mr. Davies is looking forward to receiving the concept plan for the Fire Hall land that will be re-zoned as well as the plan to complete the North East Commercial sector in Hampton Village. As soon as he is able, he will share this information with Hampton Villagers.

If you have any questions or concerns about our community email Mr. Davies at troy.davies@saskatoon.ca

HAMPTON VILLAGE SCHOOL DEVELOPMENT

Earlier in spring as I drove west along Hampton Crescent to work in the pre-dawn darkness each day, my headlights reflected on the school framework as I approached Hampton Circle. At first the reflection was stationary, but soon I realized it was a hive of activity as I saw reflections busily moving across the skeleton of the school. These were workers, climbing the scaffolds and beginning their work day. In late February, they were adding to the skeletal framework by inserting walls and applying an exterior 'skin' to the building. That exterior 'skin' is almost completely applied, and the ongoing transformation will not be as obvious as I drive to work each day. Still, walking around the perimeter of site is impressive. To me, the location seems right—it is at the heart of our community. A good place for a school.

The Hampton Village School is designed to have two full size gyms along with two multi-purpose activity rooms. The school is two stories with elevators located on both the public and Catholic sides of the building. The building will face southeast with the front entrances along Hampton Circle. The detailed blueprint (available at the website indicated below) shows the orientation on the lot, the plan and the elevation images. The central core area is the shared space, with two large gymnasiums bordering a physical activity space. The child care area and cafeteria are at the front of the school. The wings of the schools are clustered according to learning communities, with kindergarten and grade 1 being one cluster and grades 2 to 8 being the other. Each school division will have its own entrance.

The Catholic School is named St. Lorenzo Ruiz but the public school is not yet named. More community consultation is planned before the board decides on the names for all four of the new Saskatoon schools. Community meetings for each new school are currently being planned for some time in May. At these meetings, the Public School Board will be looking for feedback regarding the school name.

Also at the meetings in May, the Public School Board is expecting to introduce the new principal for each school and have division staff members available to answer any questions about the school's detailed design or future programming.

Once the meeting dates are confirmed, they will be shared through the neighbouring schools and in the new school communities, as well as on the division website www.saskatoonpublicschools.ca and social media accounts.

In the meantime, we wait and watch as this important component of our community takes shape. I welcome this addition to our neighbourhood and am excited for the benefits a school provides for our community.
