Dear Hampton Village,

This letter is bitter sweet for me to write as it will be my last message to you all as the president. I stepped down at our last meeting as I have new family commitments and will also be leaving this great neighbourhood. The president position is vacant; however Josh (the vice president) will be filling in the interim.

It was a chilly November day when I went door to door (with help from a couple neighbors) delivering a flyer, which put forward a meeting for November 30, 2009. A few confused people (including myself) showed up and we decided to start the Hampton Village Community Association. Since that day we have now hosted two annual garage sales and bbq's, developed newsletters, a website, brought in adult fitness classes, kinder soccer, and starting another soccer program this year. Unbelievable accomplishments from some very amazing volunteers.

At our 2011 AGM, we welcomed more amazing volunteers to the team. Going forward in 2012 is going to be great for Hampton Village. As the volunteer base grows, more programs and opportunities can be brought to the neighborhood with less work. I encourage you to show your support by volunteering at an event, joining the board, help with registration nights, or if you have a specific skill, offer to teach it to others in your community.

Hampton village is a wonderful place to call home and being part of the community association is something I am going to miss. I wish everyone a great 2012 year and thank you all for allowing me to be your president.

Now go volunteer!

Is Your Back Healthy?

The back is really part of the spine. These bones that make up the neck and back have three important functions. The first is to support the body. Without the structural support of this column of bones and discs, we would be unable to sit or stand.

Secondly, the spine allows for movement. If the spine did not bend we would have difficulty tying our shoes, seeing ourselves without a mirror and many other things we take for granted.

Lastly, the spine protects the spinal cord and nerves along the neck and back. These nerves are the communication system between our brain and all the other parts of our body. A spine that is not functioning as well as it should, can cause aggravation to the nerves, decreasing their ability to communicate effectively. This may show up as difficulty sleeping, indigestion, balance problems, leg or arm pains, muscle cramping, difficulty walking or as many other symptoms.

If the spine is healthy it will move well in all directions without pain or discomfort. Pain with movement is usually a sign that there is a loss of smooth motion within the joints, and that swelling has developed as a result. Saskatchewan Health’s Spine Care Pathway cites research on low back pain, which indicates 90% or more of the people with back pain suffer as a result of a mechanical breakdown of motion within their spine.

The good news is that mechanical joint pain is treatable and generally responds quickly to conservative forms of care such as chiropractic, acupuncture, massage, and physical therapy.

It is also very important what a person is doing for themselves. Physical activity, exercises to strengthen the muscles that support the spine, and attention to good postural habits, are essential. Otherwise, the benefits from treatment will not last for long, and the health of the spine will continue to decay.

A healthy spine is something athletes can very easily understand. It relates to efficient movement, greater endurance and better performance. This can be the difference between getting the gold and not even placing.

The rest of us experience the benefits of a healthy and efficiently moving spine by performing our normal daily activities. How does your body tolerate walking to the corner store, standing to prepare meals, reaching to clean, vacuuming, raking the yard, or sitting on the floor to play a game with your child or grandchild?

To be able to move with ease and comfort is normal. Symptoms are a sign that something is wrong. Intervention to help improve the health of the spine should be pursued.
